

Tracking Expenses

How to track your expenses

Today, everything is money. It is an asset for both individual people and business firms. But, expenses are killing it. A wise way to money management is money control. But, how to control it?

The answer is via expense tracking. Yes, tracing your monthly expenses will give you a brief insight to your money flow. It will help you make better decisions to save money deducting unwanted expenses.

A register and a pen

- I am sure you have a pen and a register at your home.
- Make them your expense tracking tool and start writing down your expenses.
- At the end of the month, check where your budget and expenses lies.

Online payment

- If expense tracking and manual writing is not your cup of tea, there are other ways too.
- Start making payments online.
- Now, businesses are expecting wallet payments. Apps like Paypal and other money wallets maintains your expenses history and send you invoices as well at the end of the month.

Google Spreadsheet

- Another best ways to track expenses is Google spreadsheet.
- You can classify your expenses based on categories and departments making custom tabs in the same sheet.
- Google spreadsheet supports smart queries that gives you a better insight to your money flow.

Budgeting App

- Budgeting apps are the solution that will carry your shoulder burden regarding expenses tracking and management.
- Takefin, a budgeting app is a smart mobile application with amazing algorithms.
- Add your expenses record category wise.
- The app will give you a better digital insight.

TakeFin.org

@TakeFinapp

@takefinapp_